Page 19 - The Whales in Cape Breton's Waters
ISSUE : Issue 16
Published by Ronald Caplan on 1977/6/1

Killer Whale9 Orcinus or-' are not very many in the and died in the ice 3 roaming herds like bably migrate but only whale is the cat about 20 feet. Foimd in all oceans. Beamish: 'There northwestern Atlantic but certainly some. Two were trapped 'years ago. We don't know about migrating. They are more wolves. They attack and hunt in herds, or pods. They pro- conjunction with their food." Sergeant: "The killer only v *Lale which eats other whales and seals.... It also eats fish and scavenges round ships for ftf- fal. It is hardy and re? mains in cold waters until driven out by ice...and 'probably moves north for the most part in summer with its prey. Pilot Whale, '''''' Globicephala melaena. a- the temperate North Atlantic and south- They commonly summer in coastal waters from Cape Bre-' ton north to southern Labrador and in the Gulf. They are ter? ritorial and while 'y/not the most com- i' mon in total number, B''T- they axe the most commonly seen Breton. It's food is squid as long as it can get it, and move they will follow. Those that remain eat what squid they There is a large group??=it may be 2 or 3 pods • the fisher- Bay but they work the whole of the Northumberland Strait. Atlantic White-sided Dolphin, Lagenorhynchus acutus. about 7 the temperate North Atlantic. A very common animal probab