My uncle, Lubchansky, had arranged with the agent in Halifax to meet us on the boat. And we stayed there overnight in Halifax, in the station. And they sent us on to Sydney. We got in here on a Monday night, I remember it. Sydney had about 12,000 people at that time, 1907. The steel plant opened up in 1900. The mines were working. Things were going pretty good. But they were only paying 9k
