the simmer. They had been in New York. They came, and they helped further clear the land of trees and built their bar? racks- -a beautiful barracks eventually went up at Victoria Park. (Do these people then move out of the bar? racks at Sydney Mines into the North End?) Yes. They move into homes, a great number of them. A lot of them don't come into Syd? ney, of course. A lot of them are farmers. And they move over to what we call the Northwest Arm--that area from Upper North Sydney to Leitches Creek. The majority of the people, of course, are from backwoods New York state. And they immediately go in? to farming. They're not interested in coal mining or fishing. And of course, that land along the Northwest Arm is good land. Their descendants still live there--the Lewises, the Grandmeyers, the Aliens. That whole area, you've got Loyalists.
