Pi la asteur, y dit, "J'm'en va te mette dans le panier pi said, "I'm going to go down." He said, "If there's any way at all to reach down, I'm going to reach down." He said, "When I'll be down there, if there is something to be done, I'm going to do it. But if I happen to meet the girl, and send her up, don't forget, send for me. Send the basket down for me. Because, if I ever come back on top of the hole, you wouldn't live to tell the story." So they had promised him to haul him back, if he had found the girl. So he went down there, he went far down there. And they couldn't stand by the hol? lering, and cripes knows what's going on-- chains, and cripes knows. Anyhow, he started walking, and he passed a couple of rooms, and by-and-by came across this girl. She was there. There were 2 of those gi? ants that were looking after her--they were to pass there, I think it was 2 or 3 times a day. And that Beast with Seven Heads used to pass once a day. So when he saw her, he asked her if she was the girl that was stolen, king's daughter. She said, "Yes, I am. But I'm being watched by 3 of those giants and the Seven-Headed Beast that's coming around once a day." She said, "I can't move from here. It's impossible." "Well," he said, "you got any remarks on you, or something that your father gave you, or your mother, or any of your par? ents had given you?" She said, "Yes. I've got a handkerchief that my father gave me, with a golden apple and a silver apple and pomme d'alliance"--a remembering apple, something to remember her.... They were printed on the handkerchief. (An apple of remembrance?) That's more like it. She said, "That's a gift my father gave me." Since 1914 H. H.
