So he went where he had found the cattle and things like that. He killed so many of them, and he dragged them below the hole, cut them by pieces, and he got it ready. So, the eagle came and took him. And every time she was flapping her wings, he used to throw a quarter beef in her beak. So, she got him up there. A quarter of beef, in her beak. So she got up there. Well, after he got up there, he hauled up his basket and he put it there. So, he left for the place where the king was liv? ing. He went at the palace where the king was. And they were just getting ready to get married. Brise-Bois and that girl were ready to get married, see. So when he went there, he went to the king and he told him, he said, "I thought it was the guy that had saved your daughter that was going to marry your daughter." Well, the king didn't know any better. The king said, "Yes." He said, "That's what it is. It's the guy that saved my daughter that's getting married today." He said, "Did you ever ask your daughter (60) One shot at an insulator can drop a community in its tracks. Some thoughtless people "just for the fun of it", use insulators for target practice. In fact, this happens a lot. I know because I'm a Power Corporation lineman, and it's my job to search for the cause of a power failure. People who shoot out insulators forget that a single shot can bring down a house, a factory, a hospital or even an entire city. That's why the
