Basketball Danyelle Miles, Sydney: (Would you consider basketball kind of a contact sport?) Yes. They say it's non-contact, but I find it very. Like, you don't have to be dirty-- just aggressive. Elsa Johnston, Glace Bay: Probably one of the most contact sports for women, besides soccer, I'd say. A lot of running and stop? ping and starting up. Danyelle: It's a tough game. Elsa: You have to be aggressive. Danyelle: You have to be in shape. (How do you mean, physical?) Pushing, shoving, posting up and elbowing--not dirty-- but just, you know. Posting up is when a player wants to get positioned in front of the defensive player so they can be open to the ball. And that's tough. Elsa: It's usually the two biggest people on your team. Danyelle: In order to get open, to Lynn Crawford, Whitney Pier, member of N. S. Core Team, and centre with U.C.C.B. Capers get the ball. They have to get the defender on their back. So that's aggressive. (And what do they use?) Their whole body. Elsa: Your upper part of the body. Danyelle; And your bum, and everything.
