said, said, "Have you no brains at all?" And we "No, sir." Then he looked all around and he said, "You know, when I came to this camp," he said, "I intended to kill every goddamn one of you." He said, "I planned on working you to death. But I'm going now." And he said, "I'll say before I go," he said, "you're a tough bunch of bastards!" And he got down off his stand and went away. And the Canadians are a tough bunch of bastards. You can say what you like. We got caught on Christmas of 1941. Christmas of 1942, we were saying, "Well, we'll get out in the spring." Christmas of '43, we were saying again, "We'll get out in the spring." Christmas of '44 came along: "Well, we'll get out in the spring." We got out in the fall of '45. But the last day we were there, we were in camp--same as usual--I tell you, now, the bugle would blow for "Up!" and so on and so forth. The bugle blew this morning. Got up. Blew for the fellows to go for breakfast, to get the breakfast. They went and brought it back. And the bugle blew for "Get ready for work." We got all set, and ready to go to work. And nothing happened. Waited for the other bugle to blow, and waited and waited and waited and waited. Didn't blow. So somebody said, "Let's open the door and look." And a fellow said, "Yeah, sure. You want to get your head shot off, you open her!" We sat there and sat there and sat there, and some fellow said, "Well, I'm going to peek, anyway. I'm going to have a little peek." He opened the door enough to peek out, and he said, "There's something wrong." "What's the matter?" "Not a guard in sight. Not a guard anywhere." Another fellow said, "Can you see the tower?"
