we had the experience to work with an in? dusty." You know. And it was kind of sad. Even to the end, to see Schwartz taking over was sad. (Were you a long time finding your next job?) Not really. I was out of work--I was laid off in September--and I was home all winter. And then when summer came--my hus? band now--his mother was in the hospital. And we were up visiting her when the man? ager (of the Wandlyn Hotel), she came in with a gift for her-- 'cause that's where Joe's mother worked, at the Wandlyn. And we were all sitting around talking. And I happened to mention that I worked in a laundry before. And they were looking for someone with laundry experience. And she offered me a job right then, and I went to work on Monday. So, you know, I got back to work before the un? employment went out. (And then later you worked at the candy store across the street.) And he closed up. And then I worked at Best-for-Less for the last 4 years. And they closed up. So everybody says they're never going to--I worked with Ann Young, who was at GI. And I worked with a couple of other girls--whack of them, really--there were about 10 of us from GI. And of course, when they closed down they all told me, when I got a job the next time, they're not coming to work with me. Everywhere I work, they close down! I'm looking for a job now, a sturdy place, that won't close up on me! Our thanks to Ann Young, Sydney, and Jean Samson, North Sydney, for the two G.I. poems. Available Once Again!
