We were so proud of that. We really thought that was big pay. Like, we worked hard. (And did you get to keep it for yourself?) Oh, yes. What money the girls made, that was theirs--he wouldn't take a cent of it. He wouldn't allow us to buy anything for the house with it. That was ours. But clothes--clothes for the winter. And shoes.... (All this work that you did--this was before you got married.) Oh, yes. Oh, yeah. (Did you think things would get a little easier on you if you got married?) Oh, I--I didn't want them any easier, to tell you the truth. I like work. I like work. I work now, just...I can go out. Gets up in the morning and does all my own work--my own baking and everything, scrubbing, washing. Goes out and piles the wood in the evenings, saws wood. Piles it all in the basement in the fall. Piles it in the porch. (This is now.) Yeah. (Was your work very much like your mother's work, when you got married?) I didn't see any difference. I had to carry water from way down, the river. And I had to wash with a washboard and tub. So I didn't see any difference. Because he was away working all the time. He used to be--if he wasn't working in the factory he was in North River, and then he worked in the Quarry. So he wasn't home that much. John; I worked in the gypsum plant. Plaster quarry. I worked there carpentry work. Sadie: And then he left me and went in the army--he was in the army for two years--the last war. And I was home. I had all the children then but the one.... John: Well, I'll tell you a little more. The last World War--the last World War in 1945. Well, I was home, and I wasn't making very much money. The wife and I were just barely making enough to--we never were hungry. We were never hungry. Because if there were ever work at all, I got it. But I wasn't making enough to-- for--you know, for the enjoyment. So I said to the wife, I said, "I'm going"- -I could get in the Veterans' Guard in Halifax. They wanted old veterans in the First World War--they wanted them for looking after the prisoners(-of-war). Prisoners come across overseas, land in New Brun?

swick. Then, they wanted veterans to be there to take them off the ship, and put them in the train, and take them out to Alberta--that's where the prison camp was. So, I said to the wife, I said, "Would you let me go?"
