she took two of the youngest with her-- first to New Brunswick and then to Matthisport and ended up in at Gilford, Maine. And both girls got married there in time. And my mother went over there, 1921. Well, the jobs were getting pretty scarce. They had finished the pavement, and there were very few Indians left in Millview. We went to Cape Breton--me and my father and my older brother Richard. And we still had that little house--or my father still had that little house--in Whycomomagh. And the old barn, and a shed. And at least we had lots of apples, because of all those trees! And my father, we went to Malagawatch. There were quite a few families there, Indians there, that stayed there--I mean, they lived there. James Noel Joe, we stayed with him--he had a pretty nice house. Him and my father, they were raking oysters. Celebrate the Summer in Cape Breton County! Participate in the Many Events County Communities Have Lined Up for You! And there was quite a crew raking oysters at Little Narrows. But we moved--there were 4 camps there--my Uncle Gabriel's--wigwam, tarpa? per wigwam--and my father's. And Levi Pou? lette- -he died only a few years ago.... And Levi Poulette's parents, they were really old people. They weren't there to rake, they just wanted to be there with the crowd. They were raking oysters. They got $2 a barrel, delivered at the wharf. And I suppose a barrel was just a regular- sized barrel. But, $2. And my father used to rake all day. I remember he used to get up awful early in the morning. When the rest of us would get up, my father'd be out there, and John Sylliboy--that's Uncle Gabriel's son. And we'd have to put in long days if we wanted to get that barrel --rake all day for that barrel. And then row it across to where the little wharf is now, the ferry, for their $2. And I remem? ber the man kicking because one of the barrels--oh, several times--"Oh, you've got to get more in there."
