well with them, because I played their style. And we were always a tough, rough hockey team. Maybe not the most finesse in the world. I remember--I kept an old guy alive in North Sydney, I think. There was an old fellow, I'd say he could have been 80. But he'd come to the rink every night. I was sort of the bad boy with the Glace Bay team. And I'd see him--but I just let him --like, I kept him alive. Because in North Sydney when you were coming off the ice, you had to come in between, like, the fans--you know, walk through the fans, to get in. And I'd watch him every night. And I wore big shoulder pads, they were hard. I'd watch him, and I'd see him sneaking down. See, and he'd be telling his bud? dies- -going to get a crack at me. I, maybe I'd hit somebody that night, or hurt some? body. And he was coming down to get even. He'd come down and I'd--wouldn't let on I was watching. And all of a sudden he'd whack me, and I'd just--and he'd hit the shoulder pad every night. And I'd turn and make a run for him, and he'd go back up through the stands. Now, he was an old man. And I could see him up there with the fist up, showing them how he hit me, eh. But I kept him alive, I'm sure, he used to stay alive just to come and hit me. He'd do it every night and every period. He'd come down and get a crack at me. But I know he felt so good for doing that. And I didn't mind it; I'd let him hit me. And I'd just dodge, that he'd hit me on the shoulder pad, maybe hurt his knuckles. And I'd make a run like I was going to get at Come for the summer, Stay for the fall colours • you are welcome to VICTORIA COUNTY St. Lawr?nc?
