was in union here. In fact, I was one of the organizers--I helped organize this union in 1936. But what happens: they don't listen to people that work. Governments don't listen to the working men. Never did. The only way the working man can do is revolt. As one fellow said here--I just forget what his name--he put a paper out here. He says, "We have nothing to lose but our chains." That's all we have to lose, if we revolt. And I hate to talk revolution. But I'm sure, today, if we loaded buses with about 5000 people from the city of Sydney and landed in Halifax in front of that Provincial Building in Halifax, we'd get any CO. He sat on one of our first conciliation boards. He was a terrific labour man. And he told me, he said, "Frank, we're too complacent." He said, "When our stomachs are full, our brains are dead. And when our stomach gets empty, our brain goes to work. Too late. We should be thinking of our future on a full stomach, not on an empty one." And it was the greatest piece of philosophy that I ever-- this man, he was so right. When your stomach is full, go after it. When things are blooming, not when they're going down. It's too late to fight when they're shutting it down. You know there's been over a billion and a half dollars spent here in 20 years? A billion and a half!
