didn't complain. And you were happy. But when you were a little girl growing up, and working for your father and your grandmother, were you happy?) Yes. I didn't mind. (And then, you went from that into a new career of working for your husband, and his parents, and 12 children of your own. And then doing some things for 5 more crippled children--all in the same house.) Yeah. (And some people might say, that you would say, "Oh, no. I'm not going to do all that." But you never said that.) No. (Did you ever think of running away?) Oh, no. (Never? How could you be so brave?) Well, where could I go? I had no money. Chuckles. (If you had had money, do you think you might have thought of it?) No, I don't think. I love my children, I love my husband. We had a great time. He was nice to me. (CBM: When your children would be ill--did you have medicines?) Oh, yes, we had syrup, and something like that. (Did you make it?) When the kid had worms, my grandma used to make--she had garlic in the garden there, she'd plant garlic. And she'd put a few garlic (on) a string, and put it (around) the neck--and the worms would go away. (Ro? sie: Did you ever hear of doing that with onions, too?) Yes, some put onions. With her it was garlic. (CBM: He didn't have to eat it.) No, no. The smell. (How would you know when a child had worms?) Well, if he was not feeling good. Sometimes he would scratch his bum, you know, he was always there. So, that's why I know that was (worms). Oh, sometimes, they'll choke. (You mean the worms would be at his throat?) Yeah. (As bad as that.) Oh, yes. (And did the garlic work?) Oh, yes. As soon as Grandma put garlic around--she put it on a string around the neck there. (Now, the syrup that you made....) Well, I'd boil the molasses. And then I'd chop the onions and put them in the molasses. They'd drink that. Not the onions, but they'd drink the molasses, in a spoonful of molasses. That was for a cold, or--oh, I don't know. When they were not feeling good--they were choking--the flu. (CBM: This house, it used to be....) Way up, near the mountain there. We hauled it here.
