Down North The Book of Cape Breton's Magazine Ronald Caplan, Editor A word-and-photo portrait of Cape Breton Island, Down North was first published in 1980. A beautiful new production, it is evidence of the long-lasting quality of Cape Breton's Magazine • the source of the book. The 1980 edition of Down North sold out completely and has begun to show up on the rare book market From Rum-Running to lighthouse life, ghost stories and life histories. Cape Breton Island history and crafts and just good story-telling • the book Down North delivers a wide range of the magazine's early years. From Marie Deveau's memories of "An Orange in Cheticamp" through Joe Neil MacNeil's marvelous tale in Gaelic and English of "Ian, the Big Fisherman's Son," to Bob Fitzgerald's gorgeous reminder of the connection he sees between piles of field stone and the pioneer headstones • this is an elegant respectful book about Cape Breton Island. Down North is a quality paperback: 239 pages, 286 photographs.
