nah--the Jewish New Year. What would that mean?) Just help him cook. More likely I helped him, but I don't remember too much about it.... I can just see those two incidents. And I think if I hadn't run under the stairs when he kicked me, to get me out of there, I mightn't have even known that. But that just happened to--one incident that stuck. I don't remember my father of ever putting (his) arm around me, or me putting my arm around him. I don't remember my mother doing those things. I remember, like, this skirt, you know, just once. But I don't remember the whole.... You see, those are the things, you see, that I have nothing. My life, and it's a.... (You do remember that when you'd come from school, that they would throw stones at you.) Oh, yes. (And call you a Jew.) Oh, yeah. (Was there ever anything there that you could remember that we would call to? day a pogrom?) Not where I was at that time. (So, Jews were not harassed--except for throwing stones....) But don't forget, we didn't mingle with them. With the goyim (the non-Jews). You know, you just had your own. You went to school, and then you went to your own people. (So it wasn't an

(Do you have any idea how you came to de? cide--how you learned about America?) Well, years ago, my mother's brother, Mr. Spinner, he ran away--he was in Russia at that time, that part--he ran away and he came to Canada. Then he brought his sister over--my mother's sister. Then my mother died. And after she died, my aunt brought my sister over. My sister was married to Nate David--used to be David's Market here years ago. And she died at childbirth My aunt brought my brother (Mendel) over. Then he brought me over--either my aunt or my brother--! never found out yet who paid for it. But they got me. So, they had a little store where the Vogue Theatre is now, used to be a little store there--Mrs. Cohen. And finally, she owned the store that (is) Ike's now.... (Your memories--they're like little bits of dreams, though, aren't they?) Yeah, it's like a dream, you see. But those are the things that I remember. And then another thing I remember years ago, when the houses were--like, a block here and a block there, and there's a big wide (place like) a carport, you know, closed in, the roof on it. And doors, just like a carport like I've got out there--you know, that idea. (Between the houses.) Yeah. So you kept your wood and everything against one side of the house. And I remem? ber we were being chased by the soldiers--! don't even know where they were--and they were gaining on me, they were getting at the door. And finally I couldn't run any
