for sure. We used to stay there till 3 o'clock in the morning.... (In New Waterford....) Oh, yeah, I forgot that. We used to go there. They had a French Club there, too. We went there a few times, but not very often. We used to take the bus. Yeah, we had a good time there. We used to go there, like, Mardi Gras. I think we went there at the Chandeleur, too. Noth? ing to eat, but just a big party. Oh, yeah, we used to go to a bus, and then we used to come back in a taxi. A bunch of us. Maybe sometimes we'd have to take two taxis. (Do you think singing is in the blood, the family?) Well, I say yes because all my family could sing.... Me, sometimes, if there's nobody home--I like to sing when there's nobody home. I'll sit on a chair, and I'll sing maybe for an hour. Not every day. Especially maybe once a week. (But you'll do that. You

No. Well, I could sing when my wife is home. But I'd rather to sing when I'm all alone. When the kids were small, it was differ? ent. I used to-- like this--and I used to sing. (Put them on your leg and bounce them up and down in rhythm.) Yeah. But now, maybe I'm getting old, I'd rather to sing when I'm all alone. Oh, if you come (to my) home, and you want me to sing, it wouldn't bother me. When my wife is home, she doesn't mind if I sing. But me, right now, when I'm all alone home, I like to sing, when I'm all alone. That's the way I feel now. I suppose--a person changes. (When you go to sing, which songs come to you first to sing?) Well, maybe a love song or maybe a fast song or maybe a war song. You never know. It's here. (In your head.) Yeah. Maybe it'd be a love song, maybe a war song, maybe another song, like it'll go fast, you know what I mean. When I sing I tap my feet like my father. You know what I mean? It all depends on what's coming here. ("I always like to sing sitting down be? cause standing, you can't tap your feet!") There's so many that I know. And there's so many that I have in my book now, you know what I mean? The songs that we learned in the old gen? eration- -you know what I mean? Well, (some
