Cayle with her cousin Anya and, right, with her Uncle Boris they had these pictures of L. H. Chernin and Rose Chernin of Glace Bay.... This man, Maurice, went to the Jewish li? brary in Toronto that I was involved with, and the rabbi there said, "Cayle Chernin is from Glace Bay." So he put us together and then I called the man in New York, Al? ex Gorbach. He said, "I know I'm your cou? sin. I'm related to these Chernins. And," he said, "there's a man in Russia who's very close to you. His name is Boris Cher? nin." He said, "I don't know what the con- Go ACADIAN 4 TRIPS DAILY BETWEEN SYDNEY & HALIFAX TRIP 72 - Daily pick ups in: NORTH SYDNEY, LITTLE BRAS D'OR, BIG HARBOUR, BADDECK, LITTLE NARROWS, WHYCOCOMAGH, PORT HASTINGS, PORT HAWKESBURY, & others (TRURO 1:15 P.M. So I said, "Send me his address, I'll write to him." And then he wrote. Maurice and I called him. He said, "He's your grandfa? ther Lable's youngest brother." I said to my father, "Is this possible?" He said, "No. Grandpa's youngest brother was killed by the police. I don't know, maybe it's a cousin or something like that." And then when I wrote to them and said, "Who are you, this is who we are"--they wrote back with a family tree. They showed my grandfather, the three brothers who had come, and the three sisters and the broth? er who had stayed, and their children. And then they proceeded to send us little bi? ographies of who they were and who their children were and so on. And pictures. Pictures of my great-grandparents that I was familiar with. I had taken them from my grandmother's house in 1975 when I was there and. I always carried them around with me. I thought they were wonderful faces, you know, that I related to and that these were my great - grandparents.
