Fraser, South Bar, Sergeant-Major of the 6th Battery: It was the 2nd of Sep? tember and I had gone to work in the morn? ing • I was working at Dominion Tire and Chemical • and Major Ward called me on the phone and he said, "George, we're going to mobilize." iVell, I said "Fine." So I took the overalls off and I stood thera in the corner and I said good-bye. Active service offered exciteraent and it offered an "out" from the rat-race. There were an awful lot of fellows joined the service, particularly the miners I think, that this was the in? centive: to get away froma the raines; to get into action;to get into something that was different. Although during the war, there was a draft that took some of the miners back and put them in the pits. 'Ate started to train recruits; we began re? cruiting and training them. I was put on the garrison police. So I went on patrol on Charlotte Street. We used to start at 6 o'clock in the evening and we'd operate until midnight. And the only arrest that we made was one of our own members • there were four of us and one fellow got drunk and we had to arrest him.
