said, "You'll never know how much I was wishing to be here on Saturday night." And Mrs. Gillis looked at her and she said, "Mary Belle, it's only too well I know it." And Mary Belle says, "How?" And she told her, she said, "I know you were wish? ing to be here because you walked through the kitchen and upstairs." And Mary Belle's answer was to make the sign of the cross on herself and she said, "I'll never do that again. I never realized." She said, "I heard of that happening but I never realized it could happen to me." ticularly from 6 o'clock in the evening on? ward, would not permit you to throw a drop of water out of the house because the spir? its were there. You could say. Why would they throw water out of the house anjrway? Remember, everybody didn't have a sink or bathroom or anything and (when you) washed even your face you dumped the pan out and put it back for somebody else. And he said they were not allowed to throw that. And he was deadly serious about it, you didn't laugh with him or anything like that. Now this, as I'm telling you, was told to me by Mrs. Gillis. And I'll tell you where we were: we were having a session for "Ar? chie Neil's Gape Breton," that (CBC radio) program I had, and it was at Buddy Rankin's place, the Rankin family's place up in Ma? bou when she told me that. Now, there's an? other type of forerunner. It's a type of wishing that you were someplace and you would wish that you were--strongly enough. Welcome to Baddeck! You can find it--have you got Father Anselme Chiasson's book The History of Cheticamp! If you have, look in that for the story of Father Fiset and you'll find a ghost story there that will trim any? thing that I told you. See, when the Jer? sey people came here the French people were so abused that when the Jersey people came here the French figured that these Jersey people possessed magic. Every older Frenchman will tell you that. That the Acadian French of Cheticamp believed that the Jerseys used magic. Lubie Chiasson came here and told me on my program this story, and it's in Fa? ther Anselme's History of Cheticamp. The story was that they all had magic--but the particular wizard was a fellow by the name of On the Bras d'Or Lakes -' Blue Heron Gift Shop 11" Books • Glassware • Figurines • Woodenware V' Crystal • Cassette Tapes • CD's f' Gifts for All Occasions -' BADDECK, N.
