cow. The farmer started in extolling the Jersey breed in general, and this Jersey in particular. But what had happened to one of her hind teats? Well, the man explained the last time the cow freshened she stepped on that teat. Well, Smiling Angus got down on his knees, examining the cow's udder and milk glands, and LeBlanc on the other side--and all the time the architect was going over the house without interfering. So, we got a few tips from • those two I smoothies. We learned a lot from them.... It took me quite a while before I made the INN Make Rockinghorse Inn your vacation base in Cape Breton. And then no one else would settle with me. I'd sit around the Acadian Motel. So I'd either go to Ingonish or go to Halifax and stay away for a couple of weeks. And by the time I'd get back, there'd be two or three people come looking for me, wanting to settle. So I found that it just didn't do to stay there, I had to go away. I had to go away and come back. See, I went in there absolutely green. And through trial and error I found they would settle woodland for $6, pasture land for $50, and the best agricultural land--well, some rough pasture for about $20, get up to $50 and $100 an acre, for the choicest farmland. And when you set those figures, that's what it was, but you'd go up and down a little. Well, then it was the house, and the barn, and the outbuildings that determined.
