park." I had the same feeling. (I try to put myself in your position. You had to do this job. You weren't making the decision to establish the park.) No. The land was expropriated. It had been taken from the people. But they would, some of them, would turn on me. I was the one robbing them. (You would be the butt of their bitterness.) Yes, I was the one. There was one old fellow--Kenny Timmons--at Pleasant Bay, he had a little store. And Kenny had a little piece of land--it was better woodland than anybody else had. And I wanted to give him more, but I knew if I did then I was in trouble with the others. So, I wouldn't settle with him, I'd just tease him. I'd come around and Kenny would say, "What are you gonna give me for my land?" I'd say, "Fifty cents an acre, Kenny." "You go to hell!" I'd come by again, he'd come up, "What are you going to offer me for my land today?" "Forty-nine cents an acre, Kenny." "Agh, you offered me fifty cents last time." I said, "I know, but last time the sun was shining, today it's raining." "You go to hell!" So eventually, when everybody else settled there, I offered him twelve dollars an acre. Hand shot out! My relations with the people there (Cape Breton)--I had friends in all three places, and afterwards I went back and visited some of them and I was welcomed back. Father LeBlanc got nasty with me. I don't know why he did. He entertained me, I was there and he was nice, you know.... I think, possibly, he tried to dictate to me and I was taking my orders from someone else. I don't know. I really can't tell you, but he got very nasty. One time I came up and took the mail at CONNORS COLOR PRODUCTION & LAMINATING (Division of Connors Office Centre) 350 Charlotte St., Sydney, N.S. We got through--that's the only time all winter he got through the one trip. We left Little Bras d'Or at 8 o'clock in the morning. Of course, you had to walk up over Kelly's Mountain. We hit the foot of Smokey in a snowstorm at 11 o'clock at night. We got into Burke's at 3 o'clock in the morning. (Were you on foot?) Well, I was on foot going uphill, on the level I rode on the little sled. Fellow by the name of MacNeil, poor fellow was killed at the (train) crossing.
