morning, from around the 20th of April till the 1st of June. We used to have this big trap, the same as the one you're talking about--mackerel traps. Exactly the same thing, except it wasn't as deep--same size. And it was off the range light on Point Ed? ward. We used to catch herring. And there used to be codfish get into that trap. Bring them back to the fish plant, and back to work at 8 in the morning. We got a hundred thousand pounds one day over there. And the trap almost sank. And it was a Sunday when we had to go over; it was a real no-no. And I remember I had to get somebody to row me ashore. I had to go up to a house--it was fairly close to where we had the trap. Knocked on the door Sunday morning and asked them to use the telephone. And they looked at me: "You're not supposed to be around that, hauling that trap!" I said, "If we don't, we'll lose it." Because the herring were spawning. And the spawn gets all over the mesh of the nets, the mesh of the trap, and the weight is tremendous. (Oh, it seals it.) Yeah, it kind of seals it, you're right. And the heavy, heavy weight, and the seaweed and every? thing! There were 7 men and we were pulling that thing. An awful lot of work. And it'd get full of live herring, besides. If I remember rightly, they were 16 fathoms around--a trap like that. And about 6 fathoms deep. And they had those big floats all around the top of it, and at the bottom it was like a great big basket sunk in the water. And it had a leader that went from the trap to the shore. The fish would hit the leader. Naturally, they're not going to swim ashore; they're going to swim out to the trap. And they get in and can't find their way out. That's the way they operate. Out ...

It's as simple as--probably goes back to Biblical times! George laughs. (But it was interesting what you say: there's no capacity. So if a hundred thousand fish were caught today....) Oh, my God! (We wouldn't know what to do with it.) Not those kind; they wouldn't have a clue what to do with it. (The fish plants like that are....) They're all gone. Long gone. ?? AyloPoifsPhn The plant down here in North Sydney couldn't handle that, that's here today. Well, it's shut down now, but that would never handle it. It's just not set up for that. (You said before, "We foresaw it, but we didn't foresee it, in a way." I guess we didn't act on what we foresaw.) No, and the philosophy was different.
