many soldiers there. He was hurt in the war and was in the hospital over there. The fellow that had the news came up to Sandy MacInnis's in Glendale, and said, "I can't go up there, his mother is up there." So Sandy came up and he had the sad news. My father was awful for teasing. Sandy has this news and my father was teasing Sandy about this woman, this girl. Sandy took my brother Johnny out and told him that Alec Dan was wounded in the war and was in the hospital. My mother was outside crying and I was crying too. I guess a shell came from the Germans, you know; across there was a trench over like that (waving, indicating) way down there. He was hit by German shrapnel, and he died Sunday, Aug. 18 1:00 p.m. at BEN EOIN SKI SLOPE 20 km. west of Sydney on Highway 4 An Afternoon of Great Family Entertainment FEATURING... The Germans were watching. My father went to Glendale and gave money to the priest for the Mass there. Five dollars. Alec Dan got better; he was well. Alec Dan came home safe. Ronald was home from Halifax, we had the young mare then on the wagon. Every evening he was going down to Judique and the train would come, to see who was on we knew. This night, he didn't go and a man from Bornish, Colin MacDonald--they called him Colin "Bornish"--was down in Judique. I Who came off the train but Alec Dan. There was a dance up in a vacant house, oh about half a mile from us, an old house. It was vacant, you know, and Alec Dan went to the dance with Colin "Bornish." He went up to the dance at the house; he never came home at all. In the morning, I got up about seven o'clock and who was in but Alec Dan! "Mary," he says, "why weren't you at the dance last night?" "I was hay-making," I said, "and I was too tired." (Laughter.)
