man was looking at them anyway, never said anything. But he had something in his mind anyway. So (the other fellow) had a truck- load of hay, not too big, a truckload any? way. But when he came back to the field, Pe? ter was sitting on the edge of the bank, you know, in the hay--and he had a rifle in the hay. So the other fellow was on the truck and he was driving the ox and Peter took the rifle and shot the damn thing right there! Shot the ox. The fellow had the reins and the ox (dropped). That's a true story. (Well, then what happened?) (That's a lot of money.) Oh, well, the old man didn't (care). He was a go-getter, that fellow! I'm telling you one thing: when he had something up his nut, that fellow, you couldn't change him. He was a fiery old man. He was straight, though. But if you do something to him, he'd get you back! Now that's a story about that. (I have a feeling you've always enjoyed a good laugh.) I always did. I'm gonna tell you, I had three homes and they were three happy homes. And I want to die that way. To hell with it. That's fact. It was hap? py-go-lucky. We had plenty, we'd eat plen? ty. If we didn't have too much, well, we'd slack up. And my wife was just the same as me, was happy as hell.
