Lisa MacIsaac, fiddler genes at all, I think that has something to do with it. But I read an article not so long ago in a maga? zine in Toronto in the airport--I bought the maga? zine. ... I just don't remember what magazine it was, Maclean's or not. i But anyway, on the ;outside of the mag- :azine it mentioned ; music and children i that become good I musicians. And in it it said some? thing that I was always thinking. I was really happy to get it, and I read it. And what it said was that there are parts of your brain that pick up music. And when you're very young, up to three years old--and especially be? fore you're three years old --but up till you're twelve years old, but especially be? fore you're three--if you're exposed to a lot of music then, you are twice as liable--or many times as liable, apparently--to become a musi? cian. And to really get into music. Because ? ??
