heartbroken because they didn't--you know. And I know myself--well, it was me, actu? ally, that wanted them to go. Angus proba? bly would never want them to go to a com? petition, but I thought it'd be great. "Let • s go," and it's a weekend out. They enjoyed it. But still, I would never, ev? er, ever force anyone to put their child into competition. No. I think it's hard on them. I really do. No matter how good of a fiddler they are, I think it is hard on them. I was a nervous wreck in the--well, I was so nerved up and worked up that I couldn't wait for it to get over. Probably worse than they were. (Do you have any role in encouraging cer? tain tunes that Ashley and Lisa play?) Angus: Not really. I like to see them play all different types of music. I remember a good friend in Judique here, Buddy MacMas? ter, had been asked, "Who is the best fid? dler in Cape Breton?" He wouldn't answer because Buddy was too much of a gentleman to make a statement like that. He would never say that one fiddler was better than the other. And they kept probing him and prob? ing him and finally he says, "Well," he says, "there are a lot of great fiddlers left in the woodwork that I never heard." He was a clever.... And then the gentleman kept after him and after him and after him, and then he said, "Well, you know, it's hard to judge fiddling," he says. "One person might be good at waltzes, and somebody else better at jigs and reels, and somebody else on strathspeys. So," he said, "you just don't say one is better than the other." But he would never have it said in the first place that he said one was better than the other. So, I liked Ash? ley to play all kinds. And, of course, my PULL OVER AT Le Gabriel Restaurant!
