encourage the same kind of technologies that they used to destroy their fishery in their own countries. Gillnets are of a synthetic monofilament material. First, when they were introduced, they were just old cotton nets that could rot away or get on the ocean bottom for a while and dete-riorate. But that hasn't been the case for the past fifteen or more years. I would take a stab and say that millions of them are out there right now ghost fishing. With the excep-tion of this community (Petty Harbour), every-one used them and they were introduced as a part of fishing practices all WHILE IN St. Pete4'e STOP - STAY & ENJOY OUR WARIVI UNIQUE HOSPITALITY THROUGHOUT OUR COMMUNITY & COUNTY Discover Cape Breton Differently! And as they deterio-rate or get torn, or anything like that, fishermen, as careless as they are on many occasions, not looking at the future, ei-ther discard them or throw them overboard. This is of particular concern out in mid-?dle distance waters with those modern type 50, 60 footers in the last 8 or 10 years as they get farther afield, using them on the nose and tail of the banks and the Virgin Rocks and anywhere else where there are shoals in the mid-distance waters be-tween here and the 200 mile limit. Most of them have to run out of storms a lot of the time, with hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of them being used by a single boat, and they don't get time to take them back because of the storms and everything else.
