put his ship broadside to the storm. Some? thing you're never supposed to do with a sailing ship, because if she has sails and wind in her sails it keeps her rather steady, although she'll lean over. But without sails she rolls until she rolls completely over. About 4 o'clock that afternoon he couldn't see the foremast through the drifting spray. The hurricane was almost 100 miles an hour, with spray drifting off the tops of the waves. And every time she would fall away and start to race before the hurricane, he'd put the wheel hard over and bring her up into the sea again. Broadside to the storm. Below decks I guess everybody thought that he'd gone crazy, because she was rolling so badly • but that set the broad keel of the "John Lauchlin" to the tide, so that it cut down her rate of drift. He made a complete wide circle around the Magdalen Islands. And daylight found him just north of the northeast tip of Prince Edward Island. So he ran in under a headland. The wind was by that time going down. He brought the crew on deck. Rigged up a spare foresail and came into North Sydney three days later • the only ship in the Gulf of St. Lawrence that survived. More than 1000 persons drowned on this coast and the coast of P.E.I, in that storm. In Arichat alone, as Capt. Parker points out in Cape Breton Ships and Men, 50 heads of families v/ere never heard from again. So Lauchie, being stubborn, non-conform? ist, refused to believe what the rule book said, and saved the ship and its crew. And while the storm was at its height and the trees were being uprooted around my grand? father's little log house at Big Bras d'Or • my grandmother said, "I'm afraid a- bout poor Lauchie if he's in this." My grandfather said, "Don't worry about him. He'll know just what to do in any storm. Lauchie's got a good ship and the ship's got a good master." And it did.
